Mary Cris Tapic | Executive & personal administration · Case study

A busy owner shouldn’t spend his day on hold.

The owner I supported ran several companies. Everything outside them still needed handling: bills, renewals, appointments, purchases, disputes, travel, and the problems that take hours of calls to fix. I took that work off his plate so it got done without him chasing it.

My role
Executive and personal assistant

Tools
Google Calendar, Keep, Drive, Trello, ChatGPT, phone

Period
2025–2026, supporting one business owner

What I handled

Calendar and planning

Bookings, meetings, due dates and reminders, plus a look ahead at his day or week

Notes follow-through

Reviewed his Google Keep and notes, then handled or flagged anything that needed action

Money and accounts

Bills, autopay, statement checks, account access, refunds, and bank and card disputes

Purchases and selling

Online shopping, deliveries, returns, gifts, warranty claims, and selling items online

Travel

Flights, rental cars, hotels and Airbnb, itineraries, changes and rebooking

Health and insurance

Medical appointments, prescription refills, records, insurance claims, bills and plans

Renewals and paperwork

License, passport and vehicle registration renewals, forms, and documents in Drive

Phone and devices

New device setup, plan comparisons, and carrier transfers

Research and AI

Drafted his emails, researched options before decisions, built ChatGPT SOPs and agents

EXAMPLE 1

Getting his number released between two carriers

⚠ Google Fi kept marking his number “not eligible for transfer.” Support first assumed T-Mobile owned it because it ran on T-Mobile’s network, and Google Fi’s own workaround, a temporary second account, didn’t work either.

1

Found the real owner

Called back and forth between AT&T, T-Mobile and Google Fi, escalated to tech support and a manager, and found AT&T still held the number

2

Got it in writing

AT&T’s porting team confirmed the number was active, unlocked and unblocked, and that only Google Fi could start the transfer

3

Escalated with proof

Sent that confirmation to Google Fi and asked them to submit the transfer or escalate to their backend porting team

✓ Outcome: the number transferred to Google Fi successfully.

EXAMPLE 2

A promotion he was owed but not getting

$800

back on his new phone, once the promotion was applied

$300 off, plus $500 in bill credits over 24 months

The problem

After he bought a new phone, the carrier’s promotion wasn’t applied, so the monthly credits weren’t coming in.

What I did

Followed up with carrier support until the promotion was reviewed and applied to his account.

The limit

Bills already processed couldn’t be changed, so the credits started from the next bill.

What changed

- Personal tasks were handled end to end, so he didn’t have to chase renewals, refunds or bookings himself.
- His notes and reminders were reviewed regularly, so open items didn’t sit unnoticed.
- His number reached Google Fi after support’s own workaround had failed.
- An $800 phone promotion he was owed was applied to his account.

All names and figures are illustrative. No personal, account, or medical information is shown.